SPECIAL SHOPPING GUIDE: THE STYLE OF SLEEP

Copenhagen

On the heels of the city's culinary pioneers, a new generation of hoteliers is redefining what it means to be hygge

HOTEL SANDERS.

NOMA.

THE APARTMENT.

WHERE TO EAT

Noma (noma.dk) is well worth the hype, but if you can't snag a reservation, don't fret. Its innovative alums have opened their own hot spots, from Danish-Mexican mash-up Sanchez (lovesanchez.com) to organic pizzeria Bæst (baest.dk) to tasting-menu tours de force like Amass (amassrestaurant.com) and 108 (108.dk). And the unerring hipsters behind Café Atelier September (cafeatelierseptember.com) and Apollo Bar (apollobar.dk) continue to expand their empire, having unveiled Kafeteria, designed by artist Danh Vo, at the Statens Museum for Kunst (smk.dk).

WHERE TO SHOP

After requisite stops at Danish heritage brands Georg Jensen, Royal Copenhagen, and Louis Poulsen, be sure to hit up Hay's two-level furniture showroom (hay.dk); Studio Oliver Gustav, with its array of unique finds (olivergustav.com); and Etage Projects, a showcase for pieces by leading lights like Sabine Marcelis and Soft Baroque (etageprojects.com).

GEORG JENSEN'S KOPPEL PITCHER.

By now you've heard the Danes can cook. Sixteen years ago chef René Redzepi sparked a gastronomic revolution when he opened Noma—birthplace of New Nordic cuisine and training ground for cutting-edge talents. (After a yearlong hiatus, the restaurant relocated last year to a stunning waterfront compound designed by Bjarke Ingels Group in collaboration with Studio David Thulstrup.) If local hotels have struggled to keep up, a new wave of accommodations has filled that gap. Alexander Kolpin, a onetime principal of the Royal Danish Ballet, opened Hotel Sanders, a 54-room gem with a rooftop solarium, candlelit lobby lounge, cozy bar, and restaurant. In a residential building in Christianshavn, meanwhile, former auction specialist Tina Seidenfaden Busck has expanded The Apartment, her pattern-happy gallery, to include a neighboring two-bedroom flat that can be rented by the night or week. And Danish kitchen company Vipp has opened two boutique lodgings—one a loft, the other a converted water-pumping station—designed by Thulstrup. Sweet dreams. —s.c.
